The National Institute of Antimicrobial Resistance Research and Education (NIAMRRE)

is a member organization that drives cross-sector engagement and coordinated action to combat the global threat of Antimicrobial Resistance (AMR) across humans, animals, and the environment. To achieve our mission, we have identified four distinct focus areas: research, education, collaboration, and advocacy.

- Advancing AMR research through the cultivation of networks and resources
- Improving knowledge of AMR and stewardship of antimicrobials through training and outreach
- Convening cross-sector AMR stakeholders to catalyze action to address gaps
- Raising awareness of AMR and advocating for AMR-specific funding
